Mr. Davis's Pretty Daughter.

[Correspondence of the New York World.]

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Sept. 10.—Jefferson Davis's youngest daughter—who has been called "the child of the Confederacy," because she was born at Richmond while her father ruled as President of the Confederate States—is on a visit to the family of Gen. "Rung" Lee, who lives a few miles outside of this town. Until last week Miss Davis had lived, ever since the war, at her father's home, Beauvoir, Miss. A few days ago she came to Richmond with her aunt and after calling on some of the family friends she set out for Fairfax county for a visit to Gen. Lee, who is one of the Confederate President's closest friends.

Many Alexandrians have gone out to Ravensworth, Gen. Lee's country seat, to pay their respects to the "child of the Confederacy." All speak of her admirably. Miss Davis is a typical Southern beauty. She is just tall enough to be commanding in appearance, and has a willowy, graceful form which is clad with a richness and taste that is surprising when it is remembered that this young girl has lived all her life in the retirement of a country house. Her face is long and somewhat inclined to leanness, but its every lineament bespeaks the patrician. Her complexion is a rich olive, her eyes hazel and her hair black and curling. Although still very young, and without society experience, she looks like a queen among women as she stands receiving her callers. From her conversation it appears that she cherishes the same sentiments as her father in regard to the "lost cause." She regards it as a sacred theme and considers the Southern people as martyrs to Northern greed and jealousy. That she should imbibe such sentiments is no more than natural. Ever since the war she has been at her father's side, his chief support and consolation. He educated her personally, gave her his views of life, and fashioned her in the mould of the ante-bellum Southern lady. It is said by those who know Miss Davis well that she helped her father considerably in the preparation of his recent history of the war. Her studies from youth had been directly in the line of Southern war records and political history, so that when it came to preparing the work she was a valuable assistant. Her aunt says that the old Confederate leader relied on her almost entirely in the matter of collecting and arranging statistics of the war and employed her as an amanuensis most of the time while preparing the work. Nothing pleased her so much as hunting up facts and theories to defend the South and the policy of her father's administration. Her favorite retreat at home is the big library, which consists almost exclusively of war records and histories of the United States. Here she reads to her father several hours daily, while the fallen chieftain listens, nods and dreams of the past. It is said that he fairly dotes on his handsome child—could not bear to let her out of his sight. It was only after a long struggle that he consented to her trip to Richmond and Alexandria. She seems equally devoted to her father, for she has refused several advantageous offers of marriage from wealthy Mississippi planters, in order to soothe his declining years by her presence.

While Miss Davis is in Virginia she will, it is said, visit most of the places of historic interest. She has already seen the room in the Governor's mansion at Richmond, where she was born, and pored over the war records at the Capitol. Anything of interest connected with the war has an absorbing interest for her. Wherever she goes she is received as a princess. She has received hundreds of invitations from members of the "F. F. V.," but will of course have to decline most of them, since her visit is to be a brief one. It is reported that her next visit will be to Gen. Parke Custis Lee's, and thence she will visit some of the first families along the Potomac River.

Since the above was put in type we learn from a member of General Lee's family that Miss Davis is not at Ravensworth.

A YOUNG WOMAN'S BODY IN A TRUNK.

The mystery surrounding the body found in a trunk at the Wheeling and Lake Erie railroad depot Saturday has been cleared up. It has been ascertained that it was the body of Belle Bowen, a young girl of Reedsville, Ohio, who died last Wednesday at her home. She was buried Friday afternoon, and the same night Dr. H. G. Blaine, editor of the Attica Journal, in company with Dr. M. E. Wilson, exhumed the body, placed it in the trunk, and had it conveyed to Bellevue where it was taken to Toledo in charge of Wilson. Dr. Blaine was arrested and lodged in the Bellevue jail, and Wilson who is under arrest in Toledo was taken to that place for trial. Miss Bowen was a beautiful young girl, 17 years of age, and the belle of the village. The desecration of her grave has caused great excitement in Reedsville, and it is feared that many other graves have been robbed. The body was destined for the dissecting room of the Toledo Medical College.
